

“Inequalities, Economic Models and Russian October 1917 Revolution in Historical Perspective“

Monday - Tuesday, 23-24 October 2017
DOC Research Institute, Berlin

Organizational Programme

Time	DAY 1 / 23.10.17.
09:30 - 10:00	Welcome coffee and registration
10:00 - 10:30	Opening session Vladimir Popov, DOC-RI, Berlin, Germany Revolutions, inequalities, economic systems
10:30-12:00	Session 1 - 1917 October revolution: progress or regress? Vladislav Zubok, London School of Economics, UK Soviet economic model as the response to inequality Ruslan Grinberg, Institute of International Economic and Political Studies, Russian Academy of Sciences, Moscow Perceptions of October 1917 Revolution in Russia today
12:00-13:30	Lunch
13:30 – 15:00	Session 2 - Socialism in the XX century: achievements and failures Domenico Nuti, Sapienza University of Rome, Italy The rise and fall of socialism Georgy Derlugian, New York University, Abu Dhabi Socialist revolution and social development of humanity
15:00-15:30	Coffee break

Session 3 - Inequality in Historical Perspective

Andres Solimano, United Nations Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean, Santiago, Chili

15:30 –17:00

International mobility of the very wealthy. Implications for the inequality dynamics within and between countries

Kevan Harris, UCLA, Los Angeles, USA

Inequality in the MENA over the longue duree and "what was Arab socialism?"

Time

DAY 2 / 24.10.17.

Session 4 - Inequality and evolution of economic systems

Beverly Silver, John Hopkins University, Baltimore, USA

10:30-12:00

Labor, Systemic Chaos and Inequality: From the Terminal Crisis of British World Hegemony to the Terminal Crisis of US Hegemony

Michael Ellman, University of Amsterdam

Inequality in a non-market economy

12:00-13:30

Lunch

Session 5

Vladimir Popov, DOC-RI, Berlin, Germany

13:30 -15:00

Inequality, Economic Models, and Russian October 1917 Revolution in Historical Perspective